

JORDAN

Several months ago I reviewed Jordan's Senate, House of Representatives, and National Gazette for any trace of DNA testing legislation. It was later learned that Jordan was conducting DNA testing without a legal framework, and thus no law was available for review. I revisited Jordan's government sites, searching again for the classic terms of 'DNA', 'forensic', 'genetic', and 'genetic fingerprint' and again nothing came up. We can only assume that they continue to test independent of a national law.

- Scott Knackstedt, April 12, 2011